Most people over the age of sixty who have underlying health conditions feel like the coronavirus has painted a huge bullseye on their backs, which can be depressing. Lockdown and self-isolation can have the same effect. Our Coronavirus Diary" is a humorous look into the mind-set of a couple of women of a certain age, forced into lockdown during the COVID-19 pandemic. This is another brain fart from the authors of "Over-Sixty: Shades of Gray." It is meant solely to entertain our readers during trying times by using humor to knock the virus down to size, so we can deal with our fears more easily. And if we should chuckle, at our age, it's always good to wear protection.
